HOW CAN A LOCKSMITH ENHANCE THE SECURITY OF YOUR TENANTS’ HOME OR PREMISES?

Shain and his team understand that increasing or maintaining security in your tenants’ homes and premises is an extremely important, if not, the most important responsibility when keeping your tenants’ homes and premises safe.

EMERGENCY, 24/7 LOCKSMITH SERVICES

To re-key or master key, that is the question?

If you are a landlord, property manager or body corporate, then a master key system may be exactly what you need.

When it comes to security, it always comes down to keys. How many keys do you need? Whose job will it be to distribute and manage them? Should your staff have access to all areas? Are there security risks? Answering these questions per your businesses needs can help you to assess your keying and security requirements.

Re-keying

You don’t always need to change the locks. There are cases when moving into a new home, apartment or business space, where you won’t need to replace the locks. Especially if they are good quality locks. Instead, all you may need to do is to re-key the locks. After all, there’s no reason to throw away perfectly good locks when all you need is to re-key them. This will keep the costs low and you can still have all the locks keyed the same to reduce the amount of keys being used for similar or the same locks.

Master key system

A master key system is a hierarchy of keys which allow different groups or individuals to gain access to specifically designated areas of one or more buildings. Simply put, a master keyed lock is designed to be opened by individual keys as well as the master key.

For body corporates, property managers, and large businesses a master key system offers more flexibility than keying alike. The difference being keying locks alike is to have multiple locks changed to operate with one key exclusively. Keying a lock alike is useful for domestic and smaller businesses.
